

Caught in the rat race

Nobody wants to, but everyone does!

Do the dead incite the living?

Who owns $ 1.9 trillion

capitalocene.com

totenkult.com

It all started 2000 years ago

That's when a philosophy came into the world. Three hundred years later, the rulers of the Roman Empire recognized that the subservience of this philosophy made it easier to control their people. On 27 March 380, it was therefore made the state religion. Later this religion would be called Christianity.

Symbolic seed capital of their state religion: 1 US-Dollar.

Subservience is also the guarantee that subsequently nobody will dare touching this capital that will be continuously increasing in the future. And Christians have been arming themselves against the unbelievers. Today more than ever before. The unbelievers are also arming themselves, out of self-defense.

And then, the Roman Empire collapsed. But only the Empire collapsed, not the capital of its religion. This capital is preserved. Later it is taken over by the "Holy Roman Empire" that considers itself as the successor of the Roman Empire. However, this Empire also collapsed, while the capital of its religion is preserved. Parts of the Roman Empire as well as the Holy Roman Empire were merged with their religion already before their collapse, and their capital was therefore also preserved in their religion. And over time, it became the largest empire of all times.

How large is the capital of the largest empire of all times today, and who owns it?

How large is the capital of the Empire today?

Symbolic seed capital on 27 March 380 = $ 1

The profit + the interest-bearing increase in value of the capital amounts to 1,4 % per annum (adjusted for inflation)

In addition, due to continuously new activities, it grows by 1,9 % per annum.

Every 100 years, the total amount of the capital is halved due to wars against dissidents, split-offs, revolutions, political upheavals and other events.

Question: To what amount has the capital accumulated by 1 January 2019?

A Professor of Mathematics provides the answer:

$(1,033)^{1638} * 2^{(-16)} * 1 $ = 1\ 904\ 788\ 316\ 344\ 991\ 853,-- $ $$

This is about 1.9 trillion USD

Distributed to 8 billion people, this would be about $ 238 million per person.

Hard to believe? Mathematics does not lie, and it is not corrupt (see also: “The miracle of compound interest”). (Quote Harald Lesch, astrophysicist: “Exponential growth is one of the most underestimated processes”)

Insiders even assume that the parameters (1 $, 1.4 % + 1,9 %) are way too low?

Actually, it would be impossible to calculate this amount, because a large part of this amount is part of the international capital markets as virtual capital (there are vastly more sums in circulation than reality exists). And futures trading even involves the capital of future generations. However, there is a very good reason for including this virtual capital in the total amount, because such virtual capital is significantly more destructive than real capital, and it is pushing the international financial markets without mercy. The unmanageable mesh of networks of the largest Empire of all times that has been globally interconnected is the largest shareholder and most aggressive punter in the world.

But who actually owns the capital of the Empire?

Are the stock exchanges in this world operated by puppets with a capital they don't even own?

Who owns the craziest fortune of all times?

Who owns f. ex. the Cross of Melk Abbey?

Let's assume that I own this cross. I will sell it and gamble one third of the proceeds away at the casino. Another third I waste with wine, women and song. The rest I use for buying a pile of wood which I burn. Can anybody object? No, nobody can stop me from doing it, because this cross is my property and therefore, I may use its proceeds anyway I like it.

Or let's assume that this cross is the property of a limited liability company. Can the shareholders of this limited liability company decide to sell the cross and distribute the proceeds to the shareholders (less taxes), and could anybody prevent the shareholders from doing the same with the proceeds as me? No, nobody could prevent it. Everybody is acting perfectly correct. Everybody can do the same as me.

The same applies to all other forms of companies.

But let's assume that the Church owns this cross. Is there any person in Church who could do the same as me, namely sell the cross and use the proceeds for himself at his discretion and without any restrictions? No, there is no person who could act like that because the capital of the Church is not owned by any person but only belongs to itself, to its own tradition.

Of course, the Church people may sell the cross, but the proceeds remain within the Church. They also may exchange the cross for something else, but the exchanged object also remains within the Church. People only manage the assets of the Church, but they don't own them. The assets are owned by their own historically grown tradition.

You are not the possessor (owner) of anything the proceeds of which you could not freely dispose of.

But who really owns the $ 1.9 trillion ?

The people of the world's largest religious community manage the largest assets of all times. But they do not own them. You are not the owner of anything the proceeds of which you could not freely dispose of. Such capital is owned by itself and has been growing exponentially for almost two thousand years, destroying everything that stood in its way. It is not owned by any human, it is owned by its own tradition, pushing the world's stock exchanges without mercy. Inanimate and therefore unscrupulous. Missionary work was followed by globalization. There is no life involved, but merely the traditional acts of unsuspecting puppets. It's like that because it has always been like that. And everybody is forced to participate, because this system that has no perpetrators but exclusively victims has established itself dynamically globally in all areas of life. Even a barbed wire across Europe could not stop this development. And the capital continued to grow, to about 1.9 trillion $ today.

And the living became poorer and poorer.

People in Church therefore remained as poor as their church mouse, apart from a few exceptions at the top of the hierarchy. But even they have not become really wealthy.

And their living space is more and more at risk.

Even the living space of those inside Church, because they are in the same boat. They cannot leave this boat because we have no second Earth. And the “Kingdom of Heaven” is nowhere out there, but inside every one of us.

Humans, animals and nature have one common enemy

This enemy is not made of flesh and bone but consists of historically established tradition, pushing the global players ahead without mercy with its crazy capital at the international stock exchanges and driving humans, animals and nature into the abyss. This capital operates a sound state behind most democracies, not only the USA! (Quote Horst Seehofer, Federal Minister: "Those who decide are not elected and those who are elected have nothing to decide.")

There is no human being behind the scenes but merely tradition with its unsuspecting puppets, degrading even politics to being puppets, not only the USA!. People have always been only puppets of this tradition. New people, countries and entire continents have sustained this tradition for centuries. But now it is no longer possible to find new sustenance on our planet. Extending the system to other planets is impossible, because no other planets can be reached in the near future. Without new sustenance, this capital attacks its own population. It continuously creates new, artificial needs and unnatural situations to capitalize on.

Continuously new, artificial things overstrain people, animals and nature. There is hardly any free space left for the natural needs.

Capitalism has brought many benefits for the people in this world. However, the greatest capitalist of all times ruins everything, because it does not care about people, animals or nature. There is only one thing that is important: More, more and always more. Business are usual.

The greatest capitalist of all times has a name. Its name is 1.9 trillion

This capital is not owned by living human beings. It is owned by itself, by the dead of its tradition. Inanimate and therefore insensitive, it is pushing the most aggressive places in the world (the international financial markets), exerting murderous pressure on people, animals and plants down to the farmland.

Question to a farmer who owns some hectares of farmland

“Why do you pollute your farmland with more and more chemical fertilizer?”
“I could cry when I see how I wreck my own land”, the farmer says, “but more and more of my crop is skimmed at this world’s corn exchanges. I have to do, otherwise I cannot survive.”

The dead force the farmer to kill his farmland!

How sick is that?

Who owns $ 1.9 trillion

Source: google/images/catacomb saints

The largest Empire of all times is not owned by living people, but it belongs to the dead in the catacombs, because no living person is authorized to decorate themselves with gemstones from the Church's assets. (Quote Heiner Geißler, former Federal Minister: "The assertion that there is no money to eliminate misery is a lie. There is money in the world like dirt, only the wrong people have it")

All countries of the world are indebted

Indebted to the biggest capitalist of all times. The largest capital of all times is owned by the dead in the catacombs.

The whole world is indebted to these dead

As a consequence, the living have to commercialize not only their own living space, but also the future of the generations to come in order to be able to pay the installments of these debts. Do even the unborn pay tax to the dead? Are not only the people living today taxable of part of their life, but even the people born in the future, to pay interest and dividends to the dead? Does a part of our ever-increasing financial levies go to the dead?

Did the old Egyptians already place the dead above the living, and the Christian Occident merely took over the cult of the Pharaohs?

A tradition is driving mankind insane

The death cult of the Occident

Supported by religiously indoctrinated fundamental creationists intending to put the whole world at the feet of a supposedly returning Messiah, abusing the Christian philosophy and keeping papacy alive to serve as their facade to hide their military-industrial complex. Christian philosophy in its original form never had any relevance for the capital, and the believers within the tradition were therefore in perpetual conflict with the capital. They never came to terms with it, because it always conflicted with their faith.

Guarded by countless parasites that do not attract attention and quietly and discreetly built their existence with this capital.

Praised by the large number of hypocrites holding on to this tradition to be able to ease their conscience with its ceremonies and rituals. Lying and cheating during the week, confessing and taking the “Body of Christ” on Sunday, and everything is fine.

Women have always been kept out of key positions, because many of them who can feel life growing in their belly put the love for life above the capital. Husbands (and other love relationship) have also been kept out, since for many people feeling love, capital feels rather cold.

Driven by commission recipients backed by the unmanageable mesh of networks of the biggest capital of all times that has been globally interconnected, chasing the listed global players at the international stock exchanges with ever higher and faster transactions more aggressively than ever. They have to continuously create new artificial needs to withstand the constantly increasing pressure. If you trace this mesh of networks long enough, you will get into a circle at some point without ever finding any natural persons as owners.

Defended against the rest of the world with its listed military-industrial complex. The rest of the world is also arming itself, in military terms as well as industrial terms and also missionary. Today more than ever. For them, it is self-defense.

However, the Empire isn't complete yet. The Temple of Solomon is still missing. It needs to be rebuilt, but unfortunately this place is occupied by the second most sacred site of the Muslim world.

Nobody shall dare to touch the biggest capital of all times. It is intended to be put at the feet of the returning Redeemer. Puppets of the dead have accumulated the capital as a gift to the Redeemer, so that he shall take them all to the Kingdom of Heaven. The disbelievers will be left behind in their destroyed world.

Caught in the rat race

One says to the other:

Who are you?

The Messiah and you?

I am the tradition. Have you seen,
I placed half of the world at your feet.

I have seen it all.

Why is so much blood on it everywhere? On your Hands too?

Well, um, well, it's like, uh...

What's your name?

Cain

Cain, where is your brother Abel?

Can't you see all the rituals and
Ceremonies with which you are worshiped?

Where is your brother?

But have you seen the many magnificent cathedrals in which you are worshiped?

Where is your brother?

Are you taking this seriously or are you playing a game with me?

What is it, a game?

Steyr 01.03.2019

Imprint

badhofer, steyr AUSTRIA

badhofer.at heinrich@badhofer.at

There wouldn't be nothing without something ungefahr.at

The Capitalocene

The age of the Catacomb Saints

capitalocene.com

“Madness is invisible if only
it is big enough”

Bertolt Brecht

*Truth is dreadful, some people say, dirty, stinking and hard to bear.
Everything is just a stereotype, and still the truth is white as snow.*

Wolfgang Ambros